Why we collect and how we use your information

We take your privacy seriously and we will only ever collect and use in a transparent manner information which is personal to you where it is necessary, fair and lawful to do so for the completion of our services, as well as limiting access to your personal data to those needing to carry out the processing.

The specific, explicit and legitimate interest we satisfy to process your personal information is to enable us to provide financial services and advice, and to maintain our own accounts and records.

We will collect and use your information only where one of the following lawful processing conditions set out under the Data Protection laws is satisfied:

- > You have given us your consent to send you information about products and services we offer and / or selected third parties with whom we have chosen to work to deliver products and services to you.
- > It is necessary to provide the product or service you have requested, e.g. if you wish to invest in one of the pension or savings products we recommend, we will require some personal information including, for example, your name, address, date of birth, bank account details.
- > It is necessary for us to meet our legal or regulatory obligations e.g. to send you annual review information, tell you about changes to terms and conditions in our agreement with you or for the detection and prevention of fraud.
- > It is in our legitimate interests, e.g. to deliver appropriate information and guidance so you are aware of the options that will help you get the best outcome from your product or investment; where we need to process your information to better understand you and your objectives, and wants and needs.
- > It is in the legitimate interests of a third party, e.g. sharing information with your employer's pension scheme administrator for the governance of a pension scheme of which you are a member.

Third parties with whom we may share your information

We may share your information with third parties for the reasons outlined above in, Why we collect and how we use your information.

These third parties include for example:

- > Companies who provide benefits comparison illustrations.
- > Insurance and investment companies through which we are arranging, or considering arranging, a policy on your behalf.
- > We will send personal data back to the scheme administrator when confirming the outcome of an engagement and advice process where you have made contact with us.
- > Regulators and ombudsmen for our services.
- > Credit reference and identity check agencies, and law enforcement authorities for the prevention and detection of crime.
- > HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC), e.g. for the processing of tax relief on pension payments or the prevention of tax avoidance.
- > Parties with a legitimate concern in how we run our business, such as insurers.
- > Service providers, suppliers and contractors whom we use to provide our customer relationship management system, hosting services, e.g. third party software or IT support providers for the purpose of system administration, data security, data storage, back up, disaster recovery and IT support.

We will never sell your details to a third party. Whenever we share your personal information, we will do so in line with our obligations to keep your information safe and secure.

Your individual rights

You have the right to know what information we hold about you, to tell us about any inaccuracies, and to request correction of our records.

You can object to our processing your data including our use of historical data for statistical analysis. However we have a duty to retain certain information for the reasons outlined above. If you do object to our retaining your data we may not be able to provide you with advice.

How long we keep your information

We will keep your personal information where you have made contact with us. If you have engaged with us and sought our guidance and advice then in most circumstances we will not delete your data. We keep your information only where required to meet our legal or regulatory obligations. The length of time we keep your information for these purposes will vary depending on the obligations we need to meet.

In certain circumstances, if you do not make any contact with us, we will anonymise your records after a set period of time.
